A short skirt is not a yes.
A red lip is not a yes.
A wink is not a yes.
A slow dance is not a yes.
A walk home is not a yes.
A drink back at mine is not a yes.
A kiss on the sofa is not a yes.
What I wear and how I behave
are not invitations.
The only ‘yes’ is ‘yes’

There’s a myth that surrounds women, a myth that embroils them:
women who dress or behave suggestively,
women who are playful or who act provocatively,
women who flirt or openly discuss sex - they’re ‘asking for it’.

It’s an insidious fable, and it needs to stop.

Every woman has a right to freedom of expression.
No woman deserves to be raped for it.
No one should be able to blame rape on a short skirt.
A short skirt can’t talk - a short skirt can’t say ‘yes’.

We want to start a debate about consent.

On April 11th, world renowned fashion photographer
PEROU will be capturing the empowerment of femininity with the support of Rape Crisis London.

We want you to be a part of that.

Put on some lippy, get those legs out and show off your assets
just make sure you dress up, show-off and express yourself in front of that lens.

Let’s show men #thisdoesntmeanyes.
